Hyena and Raven

Tony Lelliott
Wiehan de Jager

Hyena and Raven
were once great friends.

They played together all the time.

One day Hyena
said to his friend, "I would love to fly
into the sky with you."

Raven gave Hyena
some feathers,
which he made into
wings.

But Hyena was too heavy and couldn't fly.

"Please could I hold onto your tail as you fly up?" asked Hyena as Raven flew up into the sky.

Raven flew and flew until he was very tired.

But Hyena said,
"Just a little further,
my friend!"

Suddenly, Hyena
felt a jerk.

Raven's tail
feathers came off
in his hand!

Raven's feathers
could not hold Hyena anymore.

Hyena jumped thinking that the cloud would hold him, but it didn't!

By now he was falling fast. "Help!" he shouted.

But no one could hear him. Raven was flying high above.

Hyena crashed into the ground below.

He woke up with broken legs and grazes all over his body.

Ever since then,
Hyena limps and he has marks on his body.

He and Raven are not friends
anymore.
